8 years ago, Ozan and Yeşim fell in love and got involved in a romantic relationship. At that time, Ozan was a member of a criminal gang and worked as a bodyguard for the gang boss Ferruh. Ferruh ordered Ozan to take the rap for a murder charge that Ferruh committed. If Ozan refused, Ferruh threatened to kill his girlfriend Yeşim, who was pregnant at that time. Ozan agrees to take the fall and goes to prison in order to save Yeşim's life, but he isn't aware of her pregnancy.

Now, Ozan still works for Ferruh but he's looked down upon by the other guys. Ozan also works at an antique shop run by his gang. One day, Yeşim unexpectedly pays him a visit and tells him that she has cut ties with her disapproving family and had the baby after all. But her daughter Zeyno has been diagnosed with leukemia and needs a bone marrow transplant. She asks Ozan to take a blood test. Ozan is confused by her request then he realizes that when he left Yeşim, she was pregnant and Zeyno is his daughter. Yeşim tells Ozan that she has no interest in restarting a relationship with him and that her fiancé Reha is a good man and successful detective. But even though both Ozan and Yeşim try to hide it, they still have feelings for each other.

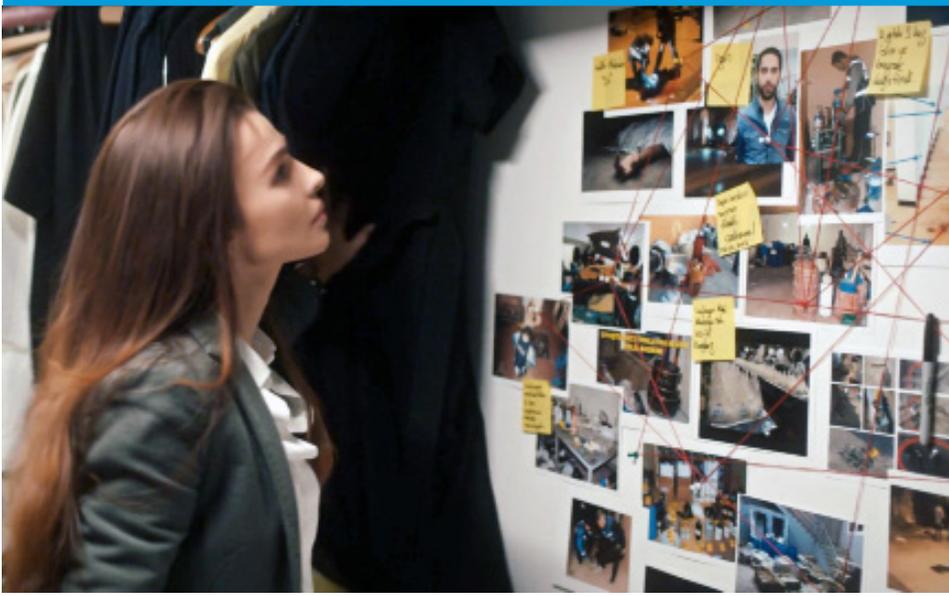

After going to the hospital for the blood test, Ozan learns that his bone-marrow is a match and he can go ahead with the transplant operation in couple of weeks. But, Ozan has been trapped and accused of murdering Ferruh's girlfriend and is –again- convicted of a crime he didn't commit. Unbeknownst to Ferruh, his dead girlfriend was an informant for Feride, a young district attorney who is after Ferruh for killing her father 6 years ago--the same murder for which Ozan took the rap.

Ozan is arrested by detective Reha, Yeşim's current fiancé. While being transported, the police car he's in has an accident and Ozan escapes. Now a fugitive, he is hunted by both the police and Ferruh's gang, and what ensues is an action-packed desperate struggle to save his life and his daughter's.
