Two teams of three players battle to identify family members of a person in the studio in the fun and fascinating game show "Match The Family". Intelligence, quick wits and gut instinct are crucial to pick out the relative from five candidates, build their earnings over five rounds and win a place in the money-spinning final.

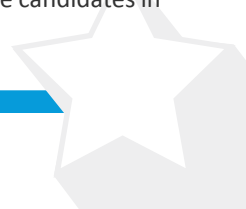

After introducing the teams, made up of friends or relatives, the presenter welcomes on stage the mystery person whose family must be identified. They need great team spirit and fast thinking to work out who the relatives are as they seek to amass prize money rising from $5,000 to $50,000 over the five rounds.

In the first round, teams must pick out the person's father, with five candidates presented to them to choose from. But before the five are revealed, the teams have to answer multiple choice questions about the father's job, hobbies or other identifying traits. The first team that has the correct answer earns the right to guess which candidate is the family member.

If they answer correctly, they add prize money 5,000USD to their money pot. A wrong answer will reduce the prize money to 4,000USD and the opposing team will have a chance to respond. If the opposing team answers incorrectly, the prize money is reduced again and the first team has a chance to answer. Now, the prize money is 3,000USD for both teams. (The prize money is reduced by 1,000USD for each wrong answer)

Five candidates enter the studio from five different revolving doors. The presenter gives the clue about the father. A childhood photo of the father is shown on a giant screen in the studio and the contestants must then determine from that which of the candidates in front of them is the real family member.

MATCH THE FAMILY

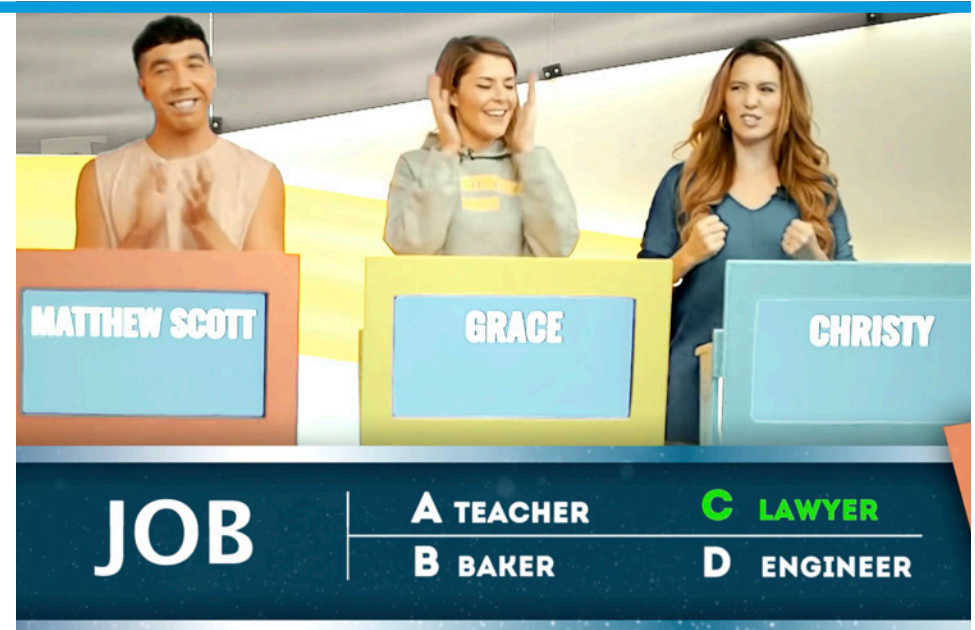

In the second round, the teams must guess the person's mother is and the prize money is 10.000USD. (The prize money is reduced by 2,000USD for each wrong answer) After a team has answered the question correctly in the second round, it earns the right to guess which candidate is the family member. The team must correctly guess who the person's mother is by examining the candidates from close up.

In the third round, they must guess the person's brother or sister. The prize money is 15.000USD. (The prize money is reduced by 3,000USD for each wrong answer) They have to identify the person's brother or sister, solely from hearing their sibling's voice.

In the fourth round, the teams must guess the person's child and prize money is 25.000USD. (The prize money is reduced by 5,000USD for each wrong answer) The person's child must be picked out by asking them a specific question about how their father would react in a particular situation.

In the fifth round, the teams must guess the person's partner and the prize money is 50.000USD. (The prize money is reduced by 10,000USD for each wrong answer) The person's partner is identified based on stories told by each of the candidates, with only one of the stories being true.

MATCH THE FAMILY

The team that collects the most prize money in the five rounds goes through to the final in which a quick-fire quiz game is played. The team must answer five questions with two options about the family with personal questions such as their age, weight and height.

The amount of the prize money starts to decrease every second and they try to keep their winnings by finding the right answer.

“Match The Family” tests contestants’ ability to recognize and understand their fellow people in a thrilling race against time, with large sums of money up for grabs. With plenty of opportunities for disagreement within the teams, it’s a recipe for high tension and fun as they build up a picture of the family.
